

I write these things because

I write these things because

well, because
the words come into my head and I want to remember them and so I write them down and for some reason I think they might be special so

I find their rhythm
and that seems to make a difference

often

I can read
one
a long time after and remember
an exact moment's feelings remembering and feeling each complexity

all over

over and over
one more time

a wonderful reward for spending some of my moments to write these things down
